HUNTING AREA- FREE RANGE

Hunting takes place in a free-range area of approximately 3800 hectares with a rich mouflon population. The hunting area is located in the southern part of the Czech Republic, near the town of Telč, whose historical centre is a UNESCO World Heritage Site. Approximately 150 km south of Prague. The hunting area is part of a forest complex that extends over 20 km in length and over 15 km in width, at an altitude of 250 to 800 metres above sea level. Thanks to the hilly terrain, slopes, ravines, viewpoints, streams, rivers and torrents, this forest complex is popular with hunters who appreciate the beauty of nature. The mixed forests are mainly spruce with some pine, birch and maple and are interspersed with meadows and fields. The presence of rocky terrain and stone walls completes the perfect habitat for the mouflon. This region of the Czech Republic has a good population of wild boar, roe deer, mouflon, fallow deer and a small population of red deer. The quality of mouflon ram trophies in the specific free range of this offer is higher than in other hunting areas, which is also due to the good management of the forest and the mouflon population. For many years, hunting has been organised mainly for mouflon ram with trophies from bronze medal upwards. The hunt, which is a mixture of hunting from high seat and stalking, has had success rates of over 85% in recent years and many of our guests have returned home with trophies from 190 to 220 CIC points. Below you find a few pictures of ram hunted in this area. The local guides know the area and the movements of the animals very well and are able to adapt the organisation of the hunting days to suit the needs and wishes of the hunter. Once the mouflon ram has been hunted, and it is possible to hunt fallow deer, there is a good population in the area with trophies averaging below bronze medal.
